The Leopard is a main battle tank designed and produced by Porsche in West Germany that first entered service in 1965. Developed in an era when HEAT warheads were thought to make conventional heavy armour of limited value, the Leopard focused on firepower in the form of the German-built version of the British L7 105-mm gun, and improved cross-country performance that was unmatched by other designs of the era. The design started as a collaborative project during the 1950s between West Germany and

A true tank that is big, fast, and easy to drive. While not as heavily armored as other tanks from the Cold War era, it was faster and more maneuverable, making the Leopard truly a “fast cat” as the name implies. This Leopard 1 A5 was the final and most advanced version of the Leopard 1 family. This version has an integrated fire control system consisting of a commander’s stabilized panoramic telescope and a gunner’s primary sight with a stereoscopic rangefinder.
