The Singer class 66 models were heavy duty domestic sewing machines that set the standard for several decades, and indeed the Class 66 bobbin and the 66 style horizontal oscillating hook arrangement are still in use on many 'new' sewing machines today.

Singer 66 Review | Sewing Insight

The Model 66 was introduced 1900 with production continuing to the 1950's. The machine was made as a hand crank, treadle and electric machine.

Various decal patterns were used on these machines and although the Singer company did not name most of the decal patterns over the years collectors have given them various descriptive names.

up until the model was superseded by the amazing Singer 201, that was around 1956 in America and production ran from 1907 to 1940 in Britain. Production stopped earlier in Britain as Singers re-tooled in the late 1930's to help in the war effort making everything from machine gun bullets to hand grenades.
