SWIMMING UPSTREAM is the heart wrenching story of a 17 year old boy who is stricken with terminal leukemia and how he deals with this tragedy. Brilliantly written and directed by Robert Emery, the film is set in Bristol RI where it was also filmed. Emery does an excellent job of keeping the film ever poignant without letting it become maudlin.

Swimming Upstream allows readers a behind-the-scenes look caused by emotional & physical abuse, dependency/codependency, as well as the devastating effects of mental illness. I'm not trying to scare anyone away from reading this novel, the above represents more than the main character, and allows the reader an understanding how everything a person goes through impacts others throughout their lifetime.
