The Law/politics Distinction in Contemporary Public Law ...

Wednesday, Dec. 27, 2000. For roughly the last century, an academic debate has raged over the nature of judicial decision-making. The radicals in this debate argue that there is, at bottom, no distinction between law and politics. They have scored important partial victories — for nearly everyone now concedes that, at least in close cases, a judge's philosophy and values play an important role.

the distinction (i.e. consciously persisting in a distinction) between law and politics at the current level of human development is necessary and indispensable. With politics, it is necessary to distinguish three fundamental dimensions: the institutional dimension, the normative dimension, and the process-related dimension.

The Relationship Between Law and Politics

Guinier does not imagine law as categorically distinct from ordinary politics; she sees it instead as a medium for the conduct of such politics. Guinier envisions law and politics as continuously in dialogue. Law inspires and provokes the claims of politically engaged agents, as it simultaneously emerges from these claims.

Perhaps DifferenceBetween.net best encapsulates the difference (and yet sameness) between law and politics in asserting, "Laws are for the people, and policies are made in the name of the people." Certainly, the work they do is vital: politicians and lawyers play crucial roles in shaping society, maintaining law and order, and helping nations move forward.

What Is the Difference Between Politics and Law?

Legislation, as a source of law, is often highly political, and is the product of a process or the creation of officials often closely bound into party politics. Legislation is also one of the exclusive powers of the state. As such, legislation is plainly both practical and inevitably political; at the same time most understandings of the relationship between law and politics have been overwhelmingly theoretical.

Political and legal constitutionalism compared. An entrenched, rights-based, and justiciable (that is, liable to trial in a court of justice) constitution is said to ensure stable and accountable government, obliging legislatures and executives to operate according to the established rules and procedures. Above all it prevents their sacrificing individual rights to administrative convenience, popular prejudices, or short-term gains.
